Excerpt: . . . and that the number of birds was much reduced by them in 1915. Expert Opinions On The Cats Destructiveness To Birds. In all my investigations into the economic status of the cat, opinions have been disregarded and only facts sought. Nevertheless, opinions of all kinds have been offered. Many cat lovers naturally are loath to believe or admit that their pets seriously menace the birds, but some frankly avow the regrettable facts. Miss Helen Leighton, president of the Animal Rescue League of Fall River, writes: I have found the cat a beautiful, clean, intelligent and affectionate pet, readily trained not to molest cage birds, but also a very dangerous enemy to bird life in general. It is idle to deny the latter point. Miss Mary A. White of Heath writes: I am fond of cats and consider them a close and valuable bond, endearing...
