Excerpt: . . . of Denver, Colorado: November 17, 1900. Obtained 3 c. c. of pus from swelling in the region of the left inguinal glands. Taken by Dr. Freeman. Direct examination of the stained pus showed numerous chaincocci which morphologically resembled streptococcus pyogenes. Also numerous short forms found resembling diplococci. November 17. Pus plated out in agar-agar, and cultures made on Lofllers blood serum and in nutrient bouillon. November 18. Growth on all above media slightly visible to naked eye. November 19. Delicate growth on the above media suficiently clear to recognize the biological characteristics of the streptococcus pyogenes, when taken into consideration with the staining qualities which the colonies exhibited when subjected to the various analine dyes. No polar staining was observed in mounts made from the various cultures either with freshly made thionine, Lofliers alkaline-methylene blue, or weak solutions of carbol-fuchsine, polar staining being one...
