Not illustrated. 1885 Excerpt: .plants, which are kept for the sake of their beautiful flowers, are fed with just the right material to make flowers. 11. This is all very wonderful, and we can not explain how it is done, nor could we do it ourselves, if we should try ever so hard. All we can say is, that God made the roots of trees and plants with such marvelous power. 12. Roots have another use, with which we are all well acquainted. The roots of some vegetables, like beets and turnips, are much larger than they need for support, or to supply themselves with food. 13. Such roots are cultivated to be used as food for ourselves and for animals. And, in some countries, great quantities of sugar are made from beets.: / WRITING EXERCISE XLI.
