THE contradiction and malignity of political debate have long since ceased to mar the tranquillity of my spirit. I will do what I can do to mitigate the asperities of politics, believing them to be altogether needless and unnatural, but for myself I have entered the region of calms, and none of these things move me. If this work be of God, it cannot be overthrown; if it be not, then the sooner it comes to naught the better for humanity. The year 1888 will always rank as having been, up to its date, the most remarkable in the history of the Temperance Reform. As it was the year of a presidential campaign, it was, for sufficiently apparent reasons, the one in which politicians of the old school would do least for prohibition; but the presence of the new school...
