SCIENCE FICTION SHORT STORIES: COLLECTION ONE (PAPERBACK)

Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 203 x 127 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .A recently expanded Collection of four short stories by C. T. Christensen, as follows: ARTICLE SIX: Technology can be of the type that has a supporting structure of other, known technologies such as the development of lasers that can be attached to a carriage that is moved under computer control and used to cut steel parts. Technology that hangs out on the edge of knowledge with only math, a couple of crude experiments, and speculation to support it would be similar to the first atomic bomb test where it was thought that it might set the atmosphere on fire. We begin with the first test of the Harrison-Lake Isolator. This technology is, definitely, of the second type and takes another 43 years to get it to do what it was hoped it would do. 196 years after that first test, very little else has been discovered about the whys and hows of isolator technology. Testing aspects of something that had such an interesting beginning creates more nervousness than interest. Of course, I am talking about planned, thoughtful testing. Once you release a technology to be used by other people--even highly trained and supervised people--those people always seem to find some way to put that technology to their own test. ELAINE S GIFT: Poets and song writers are fond of dreams; it is a regular theme of their work. Eddie Calvin has a dream, and he is one of those lucky people that can actually make it real. Of course, poets and song writers seldom make the connection--at least, in their work--between dreams and nightmares. Eddie is living his dream and heading toward a place where that connection will...
