Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Asepsis Secundum Artem: The Practical Application of the Art of Asepsis to the Preparation of Surgical Dressings The following pages give in brief the methods by which surgical dressings are prepared in our laboratories. These methods afford striking evidence of the advancement of the surgical art as well as illustrate the great progress that has been made in the technical production of dressing materials suited to the requirements of surgical practice. The processes here outlined are the practical application of scientific knowledge, the outcome of the modifications and amplifications of procedures that have been brought about in the evolution of surgery. Ten years ago, entering the field as pioneer manufacturers of antiseptic dressing materials we stated that the importance of reliable dressings cannot be overestimated, without these all the skill of the surgeon is wasted. Time has emphasized the imperative necessity and supreme importance of perfect surgical dressings. From the beginning of our experience to the present time, we have held in view one single purpose - the preparation of dressing materials that shall meet the requirements of and embrace the advances made in the art of surgery. In attaining this result, we believe that we have been factors in making the practical application of the principles both of antiseptis and asepsis universal and possible. The pages which follow are a further contribution to this end. While not presuming so much as to suggest to the physician or surgeon as to the kind or make of material he should use in wound dressing we believe that disappointments and serious results will follow unless he demands and uses dressings prepared in a manner equal to the...
