Dickerson: With His Notes and Explanations; The Charge of Judge Nelson; And the Verdict of the Jury, in the Case of Sickels Vs; Borden Numerous applications - from friends and strangers - at home abroad - made personally and by letters - for copies of the proceedings in this case, have exhausted all the newspapers containing them which I had reserved, and no more can now be procured; another publication, therefore, is needed. The charge of his Honor Judge Nelson, which, in the judgment of the many lawyers who heard it delivered, is the ablest and most accurate statement of the law of patents which that very able Judge has ever made, is eminently worthy of preservation and publication. To present it in a convenient form to the public is another motive for this publication. And the exhibition which this case makes of the persistent bigotry, and determined resistance, of such a concern as the Novelty Works to the progress of improvement, is instructive to the public, and teaches in an impressive form, the difficulties which men of genius have to encounter, and the trials through which they earn their scanty rewards. My friend Mr. Cutting, speaking for the Novelty Works, several times during the course of this trial, said: You can not compel people (meaning engine-builders) to use your improvements.
